Review

Share prices were relatively volatile during August. Investors were concerned about the prospect of a US recession due to an increase in the country's unemployment rate and a slowdown in its manufacturing sector. Despite the elevated volatility, the stock market rose later in the month as investors began to anticipate a faster pace of interest rate cuts in the US. Economic data also became somewhat more positive in the second half of the month, which helped to ease recessionary concerns. MercadoLibre, the ecommerce provider, and Fortinet, a security technology company, contributed positively to the fund's performance after delivering solid financial results. While US Federal Reserve Board Chair Jerome Powell's recent comments regarding lower interest rates gave a boost to undervalued stocks with higher levels of debt, the remarks led to a decline in technology companies Alphabet and Amazon. We reduced our holding in Home Depot on concerns about the US DIY market. We added to contract food services company Compass Group, which has defensive characteristics.

Outlook

Following a strong rally, the share prices of large technology companies involved in artificial intelligence fell sharply, jolting stock markets. Investors are questioning the long-term durability of certain technology companies and looking to other sectors. However, we believe tech firms' profit and earnings growth should support their share prices. Central banks are expected to lower interest rates as inflation eases and as other positive economic news is reported. What looks to be a closely contested US presidential election adds to rising global geopolitical risks. In our view, the stock market still offers attractive returns, especially as investors' attention shifts from a narrow focus on technology companies. We continue to focus on investment themes we believe will deliver long-term potential, and on high-quality companies that deliver regular dividends as a precaution against possible financial market volatility.
