Fund Portrait

The JSS Sustainable Equity – Green Planet seeks to achieve long-term capital appreciation through global investments in equities of companies with revenues from products and services that are contributing to green solutions. The objective is to invest in a portfolio of companies of which the average share of «Green» revenues to total revenues is 30% across the portfolio. These companies may be characterised by their contribution to improving water, soil and air quality, preserving biodiversity or fighting against climate change. The sub-fund mainly invests in four areas including ecosystem protection, resource efficiency, new energies and smart mobility. To align the sub-Fund with the «Do No Significant Harm» principles, the eligible investment universe as defined by the proprietary JSS sustainability matrix avoids firms on the exclusion list as well as industry laggards and firms with weak ESG credentials. The Sub-Fund is actively managed without replicating any benchmark. The Sub-Fund is managed without reference to any benchmark.

Review

While markets were slightly down in December, the month ended another strong year of global equity returns, led by tech megacaps. Clean tech stocks, where Green Planet has very limited exposure, continued to face pressure during the month, reflecting persistent caution about the sector's outlook under Donald Trump's presidency. Green Planet's tech megacaps, such as Microsoft and Tesla, along with select capital goods names like Siemens, Ebara, and Metso, were the key positive contributors during the month. These gains offset weaker performance in waste management (Clean Harbors, Republic Services) and software (Synopsys, PTC). The recycling sector continues to see attractive dynamics as the Europe proposes stricter revised directives, including 2030 targets for 100% recyclable packaging, a minimum recycling target of 65% by 2025, and restrictions on PFAS use in food-contact packaging by 2026. During the month, the portfolio was further concentrated by exiting positions in Danaher and BYD.

Outlook

As companies and governments pursue net-zero goals and pollution reduction, we expect continued investment in the green transition, driven by several key trends. Advances in sustainable technologies, particularly in water treatment, electrification efficiency and improved industrial processes, will create new growth opportunities, while the promotion of a circular economy will foster innovative business models. Clean energy affordability remains critical, as the falling cost of renewable technologies will improve access for consumers and businesses alike. In addition, ongoing geopolitical tensions will reinforce the need for a deep understanding of supply chain dynamics; companies that adapt to the realities of deglobalisation are likely to become industry leaders. The Green Planet Fund is well positioned to capitalise on multiple environmental opportunities across four main themes: ecosystem protection, resource efficiency, smart mobility and future energies. Across these themes, the fund aims to build a diversified global equity portfolio with significant long-term growth potential.
