Review

A shift in central bank policy caught markets by surprise. The Bank of England (BOE) held interest rates, following a significant uptick in inflation, whilst the European Central Bank (ECB) and the US Federal Reserve (Fed) cut rates by 25bps. Weak sentiment in Western economies coupled with ongoing political instability and the trajectory of rates will play a greater role in 2025. In insurance, the European Insurance and Occupational Pensions Authority (EIOPA) published stress test results for the sector. Overall, the results were positive with average solvency levels around 221.8% and enough buffer to withstand “extreme but plausible” scenarios. Credit Agricole called the remaining EUR245 million perpetual Tier 2 outstanding, whilst Phoenix called the remaining part of their USD 5.625% RT1 bond.

Outlook

The year ended with one new RT1 issue from SCOR, placing EUR 500 million with a coupon of 6%, backed by strong demand and finally with the confirmation that the Direct Line board had accepted Aviva's bid.
