Fund Portrait

The JSS Sustainable Bond - Total Return Global aims to realise medium- to long-term asset growth using a total return approach. To achieve this the sub-fund invests globally (including in emerging markets) in debt securities denominated in any currency.

It will also systematically integrate financially-material ESG aspects throughout the entire investment process, in order to avoid controversial exposures, mitigate ESG risks and harness opportunities.

Investments that are not in USD-denominated assets are largely hedged against the USD. In addition, the sub-fund can invest in securities with non-investment grade rating. However, no investments are permitted in securities with a credit rating lower than BB- (Standard & Poor's) or Ba3 (Moody's).

The Sub-Fund is actively managed without replicating any benchmark. The Sub-Fund is managed without reference to any benchmark.

Review

Bond markets rallied for the fourth consecutive month, boosted by weaker US job reports. As fears of a slowdown grew, investors priced more aggressive cuts from the US Federal Reserve, as Chair Powell reinforced expectations of a forthcoming rate cut. Against this backdrop, our focus on sovereign bonds and curve steepening continued to perform well. Our curve selection was also favourable, with the US dollar, Norwegian crown, Australian dollar, Mexican peso and Polish zloty among the best performers. The sterling and Brazil curves were disappointing. The former saw rates rise on improved economic data and the strength in manufacturing PMI. The latter was affected by fiscal fears and the risk of a rate hike. We took profits on US Treasuries and reinvested them in UK and German sovereign bonds. The Bank of Japan hiked rates on July 31, exacerbating the unwinding of carry trades and pressuring emerging currencies. We took some profits on short positions in Japanese government bonds. Corporate bonds delivered decent carry, with spread gains in our global BB corporate bonds and euro hybrids.

Outlook

The Fed is gradually shifting its focus from inflation to the labour market, with the first Fed rate cut expected in September. US duration has clearly outperformed in recent months, moving in tandem with growing expectations of rate cuts converging towards a neutral rate of 3.5% at the end of 2025. This is in line with a soft landing scenario. At current levels, we feel comfortable with a more neutral duration in US Treasuries, but would consider adding duration again if rates rise materially. We continue to look for macroeconomic opportunities where the central banks' pivot from inflation to growth is incomplete, namely the Australian, British and Norwegian curves. We think progress on inflation will see investors add in cuts to the front end. The yen has recently returned to net long positions again, suggesting that yen carry trades have mostly unwound. This should support the Brazilian real and Mexican peso, despite ongoing political concerns. Demand for corporate bonds is high, pushing spreads to levels we are not comfortable with. However, rate cuts should support credit performance as long as we avoid a recession.
