Fund Portrait

The JSS Sustainable Bond - Total Return Global aims to realise medium- to long-term asset growth using a total return approach. To achieve this the sub-fund invests globally (including in emerging markets) in debt securities denominated in any currency.

It will also systematically integrate financially-material ESG aspects throughout the entire investment process, in order to avoid controversial exposures, mitigate ESG risks and harness opportunities.

Investments that are not in USD-denominated assets are largely hedged against the USD. In addition, the sub-fund can invest in securities with non-investment grade rating. However, no investments are permitted in securities with a credit rating lower than BB- (Standard & Poor's) or Ba3 (Moody's).

The Sub-Fund is actively managed without replicating any benchmark. The Sub-Fund is managed without reference to any benchmark.

Review

The bond market recorded its worst performance in two years, amid growing likelihood of a Trump victory and a Republican sweep. Disinflation progress across G10 countries, particularly in services, and geopolitical risk were largely disregarded during the month. Real interest and breakeven rates rose significantly across the board and curves flattened. Against this backdrop, US Treasuries fell the most, with fewer than two rate cuts currently expected until the end of the year. US economic data continued to exceed expectations. We reduced our duration on USTs several months before the election, and focused on attractive curves with only a very few rate cuts priced-in (Australia, Norway). The result was not quite as expected, as correlation with the US rates remained very high, despite the publication of bond-friendly economic data. UK gilts also struggled from the announcement of an inflationary budget and additional borrowing. Europe held up relatively better, thanks to the ECB 25 bps cuts and the slowdown in business activity. Our corporate bonds posted some spread gains, with most of the spread tightening coming from the US.

Outlook

Global economic data took a back seat in the run-up to the US elections, with investors reluctant to increase duration risk. Trump's victory will pave the way for deregulation, lower taxes and tariffs on imported goods. This should ultimately lead to higher prices, less efficient production and weaker long-term growth. The high budget deficit and heavy government financing will persist. We are maintaining a relatively low duration on the US curve (3.2 years on average) as we await clarification of government policies. We prefer attractive, fiscally sound countries whose rates have mostly risen by sympathy with the US (Australia, Norway). Economic activity in Australia continues to slow down, while inflation is now within target range. Markets now pricing a shallower Bank of England cutting cycle and elevated fiscal risk, risk is tilted toward lower yields. Latin America should eventually benefit from greater clarity post-US election. Growth in Mexico has held up well, and core inflation continues to fall. We also expect Brazil to announce spending cuts soon. We consider credit to be too expensive, but momentum remains positive.
