Fund description

The US New Technology Fund was originally established to take advantage of the transfer of military technology into the public sector. These military spinoffs resulted after the fall of the Soviet Union in the late 1980's. Today the US New Technology Fund capitalizes on the adaption and rate of technological innovation, especially in the realm of "High Technology." In recent years, the fund's strategy has increasingly focused on leading edge developments in the computer and Internet related sectors, specifically the pervasive nature of these new technologies into social media, cloud-based data storage and most recently the "internet of things" sectors. Geographically the fund concentrates on US companies, however the fund also focuses on emerging countries technological progress.

Report of the Investment Manager

Up-Down Summer: Market exuberance, followed by market depression, followed by US Politics and elections all have conspired to make July markets quite a ride. Wonderful gains have been (mostly) erased by the various threats of interest rate movements, oil pricing, macro-economic influence of Middle East conflicts and more. It will be a wonderful time if all this can steady out. The US general elections in November will be quite interesting to observe, to say the least, but those are months away.

Tactically, the Fund continued to be actively managed in July, going to a cash position in anticipation of the tumultuous end-of-month July has brought.
