Ebfinanz Comment August 2024

Market development

Following weaker US labour market figures and falling purchasing market indices in August, the stock market briefly switched to “risk-off mode”. At the beginning of August, the VIX volatility index recorded its sharpest ever intraday rise. In addition, the Bank of Japan surprisingly raised its key interest rate. The subsequent rise in the value of the yen caused the Japanese stock markets to collapse, which then had an impact on other stock markets around the world.

The Japanese central bank then indicated that it would refrain from further interest rate hikes for the time being following the unexpected turbulence. This, together with the unexpectedly low initial jobless claims and the renewed fall in inflation in the USA, led to a surprisingly rapid recovery on the financial markets. The most important stock exchanges ultimately ended August in positive territory.

Portfolio performance:

The Ebfinanz AktienWelt portfolio also recovered by the end of August and achieved a performance of +0.1% in this volatile environment. The main positive contributors to performance were VAT (+7.16%), which we added to our portfolio, Swiss RE (+6.69%) and Coca Cola (+8.59%). The shares of Samsung (-9.62%) and Lonza (-5.41%) were unable to recover as quickly as the market as a whole.

Outlook:

The speech by Fed Chairman Jerome Powell at the annual central bank meeting in Jackson Hole was interpreted by the equity markets as meaning that the first interest rate cut in the US will take place in September. The fall in interest rates should ensure a broad-based recovery in earnings among small and mid caps and thus provide broader support for the upturn on the equity markets. We do not expect negative surprises to be over yet and are sticking to our rather defensive stance. We are sticking to our scenario and assume that there will be no recession.
