Manager Commentary

Market review: October was a tough month for healthcare amidst a rocky macro picture. In the US markets, it was the worse month year-to-date on a relative basis, globally, the second worse. A large part of this underperformance can be attributed to huge moves in specific sub-sectors of the healthcare space, as explained below. The managed care companies with exposure to governmental health insurance programs were the largest contributors to this month's sector underperformance. There are 3 reasons for this: First is the sustained high rate of healthcare utilization in the US for Medicare patients, now for the 7th quarter in a row. Second, upcoming changes to reimbursement laws have led to large increases in drug volumes for seniors. Third, with the redetermination of eligibility of Medicaid coverage - which was paused during COVID - the acuity mix of the population has shifted without being reflected in the state insurance rates. Overall, these effects mean stronger demand for healthcare, which is positive for other companies. The Life Science Tools & Services space was also under severe pressure, in large part due to weakness in contract research organisation (CRO) names. These companies are highly dependent on small but also large biotech and pharmaceutical companies outsourcing a part of their clinical trial operation to them. Despite the relative pick-up in the Biotech funding environment over the past 12 months, this has so far not been translating into increased CRO business. In addition, the book of large-cap business also seems to be slowing. Overall, it seems the shifting end market demand is still misunderstood by markets and companies.

Portfolio changes: We initiated positions in Gilead, Hologic and Novo Nordisk and we exited Allogene, Alto, Annovis, Atai, Bioarctic, Caribou, Cassava, Compass, Cybin, Esperion, Immune, Ionis, Mind Medicine, Organon, Quanterix and Sage.

Performance review: The largest contributors were Penumbra (+59 bps / Completed the THUNDER IDE clinical study enrollment for patients with acute ischemic stroke. Later, Penumbra beat Q3 expectations), Intra-Cellular (+51 bps / Solid Q3 results, driven by continued strong performance of CAPLYTA) and Esperion (+31 bps / Esperion's partner, Daiichi Sankyo, reported promising results from MILOS German cohort, showing an increase in LDL-C goal achievement). The largest detractors were Tandem (-89 bps / General worries of slowing diabetes device market going forward with limited company specific news flow), Hypera (-71 bps / On October 18th, Hypera announced a working capital improvement process and discontinued the FY 2024 guidance. Additionally, the company disclosed Q3 figures well below consensus forecasts. Following the announcement, Hypera received an offer from EMS (Brazil's largest pharma firm), proposing a business combination. Later in the month, Hypera rejected the offer and the stock fell) and Centene (-59 bps / Came under pressure after peers commented on ongoing acuity/ rate mismatch in Medicaid reimbursement. Reasonable good Q3 results at the end of the month were only partially able to compensate).

ESG: Firms in the portfolio did not report any material ESG issues in October.
