GLOSSARY

Additional Tier 1

Additional Tier 1 (also known as CoCo bonds) are typically perpetual debt. Issuers can repay the debt on pre-defined dates ("call dates") during the life of the instrument. An AT1, in the same fashion as other hybrid securities, has both debt and equity-like features embedded within its structure. AT1 debt pay coupons. Coupon payments are discretionary. They can be suspended by the issuer without triggering a credit event. AT1 are instruments that can transform into shares of equity or can be written off upon a triggering event. The trigger is a pre-defined limit expressed as a threshold of the issuing bank's capital ratio: typically low trigger (5.125%) and high trigger (7% or 8%). The trigger can also be activated by the relevant regulatory authority, if it considers that the bank faces risks of becoming non-viable, even though the trigger has not yet been reached: PONV (Point of Non Viability).

Duration

Duration assesses the sensitivity of interest rate changes or credit spread changes on the price of a bond or of the NAV of a bond fund: e. g. 3-year interest rate duration means that the value of a bond would increase by 3% if interest rates decrease by 1% and vice versa, 3-year credit spread duration means that the value of a bond would increase by 3% if credit spread decrease by 1% and vice versa.

Investment grade

A rating provides information about the creditworthiness of a debtor. The higher the rating, the less likely the debtor is to default. A distinction is made between high-quality (investment grade) and speculative bonds (high-yield or junk bonds). For investment-grade bonds, Standard & Poor's issues ratings from AAA to BBB, while Moody's ratings range from Aaa to Baa.

High-yield bonds

High-yield bonds pay a higher coupon than investment grade bonds because they are viewed by rating agencies and investors as more likely to default than investment grade bonds. For high yield bonds, Standard & Poor's issues ratings from BB to C, while Moody's ratings range from Ba1 to C.

Subordinated debt

A subordinated debt ranks lower than senior debt in case of liquidation. A subordinated debt ranks higher than equity in case of liquidation.
