The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise as a result of market and currency fluctuations and you may not get back the amount originally invested. For further information on risks please refer to the Fund's KID and/or the Prospectus. Investing in companies in emerging markets involves higher risk than investing in established economies or securities markets. Emerging Markets may have less stable legal and political systems, which could affect the safe-keeping or value of assets. The Fund's investment include shares in small-cap companies and these tend to be traded less frequently and in lower volumes than larger companies making them potentially less liquid and more volatile. The annual management charge is deducted from the capital of the Fund. This will increase the income from the Fund but may constrain or erode potential for capital growth.

Fund manager's commentary

- August began with a sharp increase in volatility, driven by concerns about global economic growth and interest rate policy
- The rising unemployment rate and persistent inflation above the Federal Reserve's target, coupled with geopolitical tensions, weighed on cyclical sectors, the US dollar, and oil prices, indicating a potential economic slowdown in the United States
- The fund outperformed during the initial drawdown but lagged behind the subsequent rebound, ultimately finishing slightly behind the index

August began with a huge spike in volatility. Over the first three trading days of the month, the US 2-year Treasury yield fell to 3.7%, the yen strengthened to USDJPY142, and the MSCI AC World Index fell 6.6%. On Monday 5th August, the TOPIX fell more than 12%, and Nvidia opened down more than 15%. The VIX volatility index briefly rose above 60 and finished that day just below 40, a level not seen since 2020.

Markets recovered and stabilised over the rest of the month even as the US 2-year remained below 4% and the yen in the mid-140s. The VIX was back around 15 by the middle of August and the MSCI AC World Index finished the month up over 3% in USD.

US macroeconomic data generally pointed to a slowdown even if the pace of it and the risk of recession are still unclear. With unemployment rising, Jerome Powell signalled that the Federal Reserve is likely to cut rates in September despite most measures of inflation remaining comfortably above 2%. Cyclical concerns weighed on the US Consumer Discretionary sector, the US dollar and the oil price despite rising tension in Ukraine and the Middle East.

The fund outperformed the drawdown but lagged the rebound and ended the month slightly behind the index. We saw some weakness in a few loosely energy-related names, although not really driven by the oil price. Cameco continued to retreat from its highs in May/June: having trimmed our position, we have been topping back up now as fundamentals remain strong. Couche-Tard sold off after confirming they had made a takeover proposal for Seven & i Holdings. The newly purchased Emerson was also down over the month, as were other recent additions CDW and QBE, which reported Q2 results showing insufficient evidence of an upturn in execution. We remain comfortable with their longer-term prospects and valuation support.
