The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise as a result of market and currency fluctuations and you may not get back the amount originally invested. For further information on risks please refer to the Fund's KID and/or the Prospectus. Investing in companies in emerging markets involves higher risk than investing in established economies or securities markets. Emerging Markets may have less stable legal and political systems, which could affect the safe-keeping or value of assets. The Fund's investment include shares in small-cap companies and these tend to be traded less frequently and in lower volumes than larger companies making them potentially less liquid and more volatile. The annual management charge is deducted from the capital of the Fund. This will increase the income from the Fund but may constrain or erode potential for capital growth.

Fund manager's commentary

- Equity markets rose in June, driven by a small group of mega-cap stocks in technology and pharmaceuticals
- The fund underperformed due to lack of exposure to these leading stocks, but holdings in insurers and exchanges performed well
- We continue to believe that there are strong opportunities outside the dominant themes and this is where we focus our energy

After a few slightly more volatile months, June returned to a familiar pattern: falling volatility and rising equity markets with extremely narrow leadership. The Bloomberg 'Mag-7' index was up another 10%, accounting for 87% of the total Index return during the month, and they are now more than 20% of the MSCI AC World Index, having been less than 17% at the start of the year. A total of twelve mega-cap stocks (a 'Terrific Twelve'? a 'Dominant Dozen?') – including the other three major semiconductor names (Broadcom, TSMC and ASML) and two GLP-1 names in the pharma sector (Eli Lilly and Novo Nordisk) – are now nearly 25% of the index and accounted for the entire total return during June and the second quarter. Six companies now have a market cap above $1tn, of which three are more than $3tn. Less than six years ago, Apple was making headlines for breaking above $1tn.

With little exposure to this group of stocks, the fund was broadly flat during the month. Our insurers and exchanges rose, whereas a number of our healthcare and staples names fell, as did some of our resource names and European industrials – the latter in part a reaction to increased political uncertainty highlighted by the calling of a snap parliamentary election in France. We have reduced our holding in Thales in response.

When leadership is this narrow, it is easy to assume that there is only one way to deliver returns, and that requires you to get a handful of big thematic and macro calls right. We disagree - many interesting things are going on beyond AI, GLP-1s, inflation and interest rates. Since Covid, there has been an unusual lack of coordination between cycles, creating some real disconnects between valuations and fundamentals. Currently, there are a multitude of sectors worth monitoring closely, including traditionally stable areas such as staples (eg spirits) and healthcare (eg life sciences), as well as more classically cyclical areas like industrial automation and automotive semiconductors. By triangulating compounding potential, valuation and execution, our process allows us to recognise when these disconnects represent genuine opportunities and when they can drive strong medium-term returns.

We added three new names to the portfolio during the month: the Australian insurer QBE, the Japanese electronics company Murata, and the database software company Oracle, which we have continued to monitor closely since selling it two years ago and which is now seeing a strong acceleration in earnings growth which make us more comfortable about its valuation and its balance sheet. Given that we now have a maximum of forty stocks, these were partially funded by selling Svenska Handelsbanken and FIS Global.
