The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise as a result of market and currency fluctuations and you may not get back the amount originally invested. For further information on risks please refer to the Fund's KID and/or the Prospectus. The Fund's investment include shares in small-cap companies and these tend to be traded less frequently and in lower volumes than larger companies making them potentially less liquid and more volatile. The annual management charge is deducted from the capital of the Fund. This will increase the income from the Fund but may constrain or erode potential for capital growth.

NAV of Share Class A in GBP, net income reinvested, net of fees. The A Acc GBP Class was launched on 23 October 2009. During the period 16 June 2008 to 23 October 2009 the performance record is based on the pre-existing share class that had a higher management fee. Performance data for the period 16 June 2008 to 22 October 2009 is for Ryder Court UK Dynamic Fund. From 23 October 2009 onwards, the Fund converted to the JOHCM UK Dynamic Fund. Performance of other share classes may vary and is available on request.

Fund manager's commentary

- August's volatility highlighted a Nasdaq mini plunge, persistent midcap weakness, and cyclical declines, reflecting US-led global slowdown fears and creating mispriced opportunities, especially in the UK
- Defensive sectors performed well; GSK's rebound was offset by AstraZeneca's decline, impacting the fund's health care positions
- Mony Group (formerly Moneysupermarket) faced market concerns over insurance switching volumes, but progress in wholesale and AI, along with management share purchases, indicate underlying value

Back in the mists of time, August was a month for reflection and relaxation, a process very much aided by genteel and suitably accommodating markets. Those days have long gone. Each passing year seems to bring an increasing velocity of newsflow, volatility and a frenzied rush to release results before the sunbeds get packed away for the season. Evidence suggests this does not necessarily make for a more efficient market but sadly it has become the practical reality in what is an increasingly hyper connected world. This time around, a Nasdaq mini plunge caught the eye, allied to persistent weakness in midcap and cyclical names at the expense of staples and defensives, the resurgence of the latter reflected increasing fears of a US led global slowdown. Such a distortion to global allocations has its distractions, but a pleasing side effect is the plethora of mispriced opportunities it leaves elsewhere, and they are no more pronounced than in the UK.

Per the market mix impact described above, defensively orientated sectors were strong over the month. In health care, this was a small net negative as a modest rebound in GSK, rallying from its Zantac-induced lows boosted by some consistent but minor drug progress in the portfolio, was offset by a broadly equal move by AstraZeneca, which is a substantial underweight position for the Fund.

Elsewhere, the most pronounced detractor was Crest Nicholson as a prior approach from industry peer Bellway melted away. Whilst this was a little unfortunate, the fact that Bellway saw attractions here in the first place speaks to the latent value on offer from a franchise that has consistently underearned relative to its potential and possesses one of the longest and most attractive landbanks in the sector. As documented previously, credible new management has been injected here, and we see significant potential to drive shareholder value through a more disciplined capital approach.

Mony Group (formerly Moneysupermarket) saw weakness over the month as the market fretted over a potential reduction in insurance switching volumes as premium inflation started to fade. Whilst this is entirely possible, such a theory is untested at these elevated levels of absolute cost, as the car insurance industry has been forced to reprice policies to reflect substantially higher claims inflation and cheap capital is no longer flooding in to dampen rates on the first sign of improvement. In addition, it overlooks the strong progress made on wholesale (where significant deals have been signed, including with industry leader Autotrader) and its substantial progress on AI and data, through which it's already demonstrating productivity improvement and a pleasing cadence of new product introductions. Management share purchases here suggest we are not the only ones to see value.

Rolls-Royce, meanwhile, delivered another great set of results that trounced estimates, with the cash flow particularly impressive and growth opportunities around data centres in power systems and small module nuclear reactors (SMRs) coming increasingly into view. A subsequent meeting with management was highly reassuring and lends credence to the view that despite a strong period of performance, there is plenty more to go from here. It remains a core position.
