Fund manager's report

The global economy remains on a solid growth path with varying regional dynamics. US inflation data published in June was below market expectations and led to a rally in interest rate markets. In the US, the yield on 10-year government bonds fell by 10 basis points (bps) and in Germany by 16 bps. In Switzerland, the Swiss National Bank took advantage of its room for manoeuvre in monetary policy by moderating inflation and cut its key interest rates by 25 bps for the second time this year. The yield on a 10-year bond issued by the Swiss Confederation fell by 30 bps. Risk premiums on corporate bonds have widened slightly. The subfund's benchmark yield fell by 8 basis points to 4.82%. The fund had a positive total return due to falling interest rates. The relative total return was below that of the benchmark. Currency positioning made a positive relative contribution to performance. Credit and maturity positioning as well as stock selection resulted in negative performance contributions.
