

zMonthly November 24

Donald Trump back in the White House

In November, financial markets were dominated by the US presidential election. Donald Trump won the race by an unexpectedly large margin. Trump's promises to re-industrialise the country, reduce corporate taxes, cut red tape and impose sweeping import tariffs were received differently by global stock markets. US equity markets reacted euphorically, with the S&P 500 posting its biggest one-day post-election gain. On the other hand, fears of rising protectionism weighed on European equity markets in particular. As the month progressed, the new president's personnel decisions and the threat of further import tariffs influenced markets. The nomination of anti-vaccination campaigner Robert F. Kennedy Jr. as Secretary of Health and Human Services was the main source of uncertainty, while the proposal to nominate Scott Bessent as future Secretary of the Treasury managed to calm the waters. Private bank Julius Bär reported a significant acceleration in net new money in the first ten months of the year, helping to boost its share price. At the Capital Markets Day, DKSH clarified its medium-term targets for margin expansion and acquisitions. Zurich IG pleased investors with the targets for the next three years presented at the Investor Day. In contrast, Nestlé's new CEO Laurent Freixe failed to convince investors with his remodelling plans. The fund gained 0.9% in November (SPI -0.2%).

Add to large caps

During the month we increased our positions in Novartis, Nestlé, Givaudan, Swisscom, SGS and ABB. On the other hand, profits were realised on Julius Bär, Holcim, Swiss Re and Accelleron following strong price gains.

Swiss industry hit by weak demand

The situation in the key markets of Germany and China has deteriorated further in recent weeks, led by the European car crisis. Added to this are the uncertainties surrounding Trump's "America First" policy. No one knows what the new US administration will do with the tariffs and other measures it has threatened to impose. This will affect business investment and consumer sentiment in Europe and Asia in particular. As a result, the start to the new year will be slow for many manufacturing companies, and the almost habitual year-end rally is unlikely to materialise. On the other hand, stocks of cyclical companies with healthy balance sheets could slowly but surely find solid ground after the sharp price corrections.
