Market Review in Q4 2024

Regional growth divergences appear to have persisted during the fourth quarter. At least, this is suggested by key leading indicators, which point to robust growth in the United States and below-average growth in many European economies. The central banks continued their interest rate cuts despite sometimes still elevated inflation levels. The US Federal Reserve, the European Central Bank, and the Swiss National Bank each cut their key interest rates by 50 basis points in the fourth quarter.

Economic developments in financial markets were overshadowed by the US presidential election. The re-election of Donald Trump led to a rise in inflation expectations among investors while dampening expectations for US budget consolidation and further rate cuts. This caused bond yields to increase, which negatively impacted global bond markets. The Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index recorded a quarter-on-quarter loss of -5.1%. US equities (S&P 500 +2.4%) benefited from the prospect of potential tax cuts and deregulation measures. In contrast, concerns over potential tariffs and trade barriers weighed on market sentiment in Europe. The EuroStoxx 50 declined by -1.7%, while the Swiss SMI delivered a particularly weak performance, falling by -4.7%.

Portfolio Activity in Q4 2024

We regularly took profit on outperforming equities and allocated the proceeds to underperforming bonds.
