Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future results and can be misleading. As the fund is denominated in a currency that may differ than an investor's base currency, changes in the rate of exchange may have an adverse effect on prices and incomes. Performance is shown net of fees and expenses for the relevant share class over the reference period. All performance figures reflect the reinvestment of dividends and do not take into account the commissions and costs incurred on the issue and redemption of shares, if any. Individual costs are not taken into account and would have a negative impact on the performance. With an investment amount of EUR 1,000 over an investment period of five years, the investment result in the first year would be reduced by the front-end load of up to EUR 50 (5%) as well as by additional individual custody charges. In subsequent years, the investment result would also be reduced by the individual custody account costs incurred. The reference benchmark of this class is used for performance comparison purposes only (dividend reinvested). The fund is actively managed. No benchmark is directly identical to a fund, thus the performance of a benchmark is not a reliable indicator of future performance of the fund to which it is compared. There can be no assurance that a return will be achieved or that a substantial loss of capital will not be incurred.

Market review

Trading patterns in November showed signs of extreme divergence. The S&P gained 5.9%, the MSCI World Healthcare Index retreated 0.8% and so did the Bellevue Obesity Solutions (Lux) Fund (USD / I shares).

Markets took their cue primarily from the outcome of the elections in the US. Donald Trump's victory in the presidential election and the Republican sweep of both chambers of Congress gave rise to expectations that the new government could inject more strength into the US economy and Wall Street. The dollar strengthened, which also had a significant impact on the market, because of the potentially inflationary impact of Trump's budget proposals, which in turn could stand in the way of further rate cuts by the Federal Reserve. Within the healthcare sector, the nomination of Robert F. Kennedy Jr. as the next US health secretary created uncertainty among investors. Despite his repeated claims that he is not against vaccines, the man remains a source of controversy due to his past statements about vaccines. His nomination therefore led to some volatility, especially in biopharma stocks. Turning to clinical pipeline news, the month under review began with the Obesity Week conference in San Antonio, which we attended in person. We received valuable information about doctors' latest findings and experiences regarding weight-loss drugs and about recent data readouts for oral amylin and other oral treatments. Several panel discussions and presentations addressed the practical and long-term use of anti-obesity medications and were both insightful and thought-provoking.

The following stocks were the best portfolio performers during the month under review: Rhythm Therapeutics performed well after releasing additional real-world data from a French trial of setmelanotide in patients with hypothalamic obesity (HO). This data, from trials in both pediatric and adult HO patients, bodes well for the Phase III data scheduled for release during the first half of 2025. Scholar Rock advanced on news that its competitor Biohaven failed to reach the primary endpoint of a Phase III trial of an anti-myostatin protein – a statistically significant change from baseline in muscle function. This reduced the likelihood that Scholar Rock will be exposed to competition in its anti-myostatin portfolio, at least in the short term on this front.

The following stocks detracted from fund performance: Viking Therapeutics was weak despite having presented positive data from a Phase I study of its oral GLP-1 drug at Obesity Week in San Antonio. The highest dose level of 100 mg demonstrated class-leading weight loss and was well tolerated with only mild cases of nausea. No patients withdrew from the trial. The company plans to initiate a Phase II trial soon and will also continue to focus on the production scalability of the oral formulation. Portfolio companies Zealand Pharma and Regeneron were also performance detractors.

Positioning & outlook

The companies in the fund's portfolio are working on technologies or products for novel treatment solutions and holistic treatment approaches. Selected healthcare companies with relevant exposure to the obesity care market can be found in the portfolio, and up to 20% of the fund's assets can be invested in fitness and nutrition companies that have a strong growth profile and a modest valuation. The Bellevue Obesity Solutions (Lux) Fund is well-positioned to profit from the milestones likely to be reached in 2024 and 2025. On the regulatory front, innovation that helps to address the obesity crisis is being encouraged and promoted. Besides clinical trial data readouts and today's attractive valuations, share prices will also be driven ongoing M&A activity.

Before the year is out, we expect positive news flow on obesity therapies and major trial readouts. Novo Nordisk will present Phase III data on CagriSema in December. Looking ahead to the first half of 2025, we expect key Phase III data from Eli Lilly for its oral treatment orforglipron. Pipeline updates on therapeutics that preserve muscle mass are also expected, for instance from Eli Lilly, Scholar Rock and Regeneron. Demand is currently much greater than supply, so increasing production levels is crucial for the GLP-1 market. We are also closely monitoring developments as to whether this class of therapeutics could be approved for the treatment of other diseases, such as cardiovascular disorders, obstructive sleep apnea and chronic kidney disease.

Benefits

- The increasing prevalence of obesity, the numerous associated comorbidities and subsequent medical conditions, and its huge direct and indirect economic burden make obesity very attractive from an investment perspective.
- This mega trend has gained a very visible profile thanks to medical progress (e.g. GLP-1 agonists), high social interest and public campaigns.
- Companies active in this field have above-average growth potential for the above reasons.
- Access to innovative companies across the entire value chain, in nutrition and physical activity-related markets, obesity diagnostics and treatment, and in the treatment of the comorbidities and subsequent medical conditions.
- Bellevue – a pioneer in healthcare investing since 1993 and now one of the largest independent investors in the healthcare space in Europe.

You can find a detailed presentation of the risks faced by this fund in the “Special Investment Risks” section of the sales prospectus.
