Review

July was a stellar month for equities. The US market in particular was supported by falling inflation and robust economic data, which raised hopes of a less aggressive monetary policy and the potential for a near-term end to US rate hikes. However, uncertainty regarding the strength of economic activity in H2 2023 is high as the effect of higher interest rates remains to be seen. In a strong market for cyclical consumer stocks, the Next-Gen Consumer fund performed in line with the broader group of peer consumer funds. The fund benefited from a highly positive performance across next-gen themes such as gaming, live events, online advertising, travel, smart mobility and sportswear. On the other hand, the fund suffered from profit-taking across luxury names, with Q2 results proving slightly disappointing compared to high expectations. In the fast casual dining segment, Chipotle also suffered from relatively underwhelming Q3 guidance after its strong pre-publication performance. We see no major change to our investment assumptions and view the weakness as an opportunity.

Outlook

The macro situation has been better than expected in 2023, mainly thanks to household savings and a de-synchronized vs synchronized global economic cycle. This has been primarily reflected by robust services versus weaker manufacturing, and has led to deviations in sector performance. We consider growth expectations to be crucial for equities going forward and are maintaining a balanced portfolio, investing in companies in structurally growing areas and with fundamentally attractive investment cases. The portfolio strategy is unchanged. Consumer priorities are changing at a fast pace, a transformation driven by the specific consumption choices of next-gen consumers. We have positioned the portfolio to benefit from this transformation with a concentrated selection of quality companies well exposed to next-gen consumer preferences across 12 subthemes. The quality bias is clear: the average ROE of companies in the portfolio currently sits close to 25%, with modest leverage.
