Fund Portrait

The JSS Sustainable Bond – Emerging Markets Local Currency invests primarily in Emerging Market bonds denominated in local currencies. The strategy seeks to generate attractive risk-adjusted returns by investing in fixed income instruments with high real local interest rates and attractive interest rate differential compared to the US Dollar. It will also systematically integrate financially-material ESG aspects throughout the entire investment process, in order to avoid controversial exposures, mitigate ESG risks and harness opportunities. Investors should also benefit from local currency appreciation as the economic fundamentals and growth prospects of a selection of Emerging Economies continue improving.

Review

Emerging market (EM) local currency bonds delivered positive returns in July, driven mostly by appreciating EM forex, although compression in local currency bond yields also contributed. Declining CPI data from the United States continued to bolster investor appetite for risk assets, as expectations of moderating monetary policy at the US Federal Reserve gained additional strength. Consequently, emerging markets with a higher beta than the benchmark outperformed and most overweight positions added value. Flows into EM local currency bonds ex-China have been volatile and the four-week average is slightly negative. China's economic momentum continues to be weak, raising fears of an adverse impact on global growth. The best performing region was Latin America, followed by Eastern Europe. The South Africa rand was by far the best performing currency, followed by the Colombian peso. Turkey was on the negative side as the lira weakened again after disappointing central bank intervention, as was the Chilean peso as rate cut expectations gained traction.

Outlook

We took the opportunity of the stronger market to reduce some of our currency exposure in favour of increasing interest duration in selected markets. But overall, we still favour the overweight in EM forex due to a combination of attractive valuations and weaker USD expectations. More specifically, we remain overweight in the Brazilian real, the Indonesian rupee, the Mexican, Colombian and Chilean pesos, while we are underweighting the South African rand and the Malaysian ringgit. We have increased our overweight in duration as we anticipate a steep decline in inflation over the next 12 to 18 months throughout the emerging markets. We continue to favour high real rate markets in which policy rates are higher than current and expected inflation. We are more cautious in Eastern Europe as elevated inflation and the economic slowdown are painting a difficult picture. We have local market overweight positions in South Africa, Brazil, Mexico, Chile and Indonesia, and underweights in Thailand and Romania.
