⁴ Reference Index in currency of share class (without costs)

March was a volatile month; driven by the velocity in rates, a retracement of credit spreads and the impact of the Ukraine war. Positives were focused on a downgrade of the 'worst case' outcome to the Ukraine war – that being Russia recognising Kiev was not a realistic military target and thus there needed to be a negotiated settlement between parties.

Monthly performance

In March the fund performed positively with 0.5%. US and European government bond yields moved higher during the month and credit spreads widened compared to prior-month levels.

YTD performance

YTD as of the end of March, the fund has delivered a negative performance of 2.9%. US and European government bond yields moved higher in the first quarter and credit spreads widened compared to levels at end-2021.

Performance contributors

Positive contributors to performance included (i) issue selection in banking; (ii) issue selection in energy and gaming; (iii) overweight in telecommunications and issue selection in wirelines.

Performance detractors

Detractors from performance included (i) issue selection in insurance; and (ii) issue selection in medical products.

Current investment strategy

We maintained our beta underweight to the market during the month; however, we were active in managing both sector and duration positioning. We added to the auto sector at the higher market yields (remain underweight the sector), we reduced retail and we added to the telcos sector by reducing the large Telecom Italia underweight and buying secured short-dated paper. Finally, we added some shorted-dated China high yield during the month. Our duration management was less pronounced but included reducing long-dated dollar off-bench securities.

Risks

Depending on the credit quality, the default risk is higher in the case of high yield bonds than with investment grade corporate and government bonds. Changes in interest rates have an effect on the value of the portfolio. This requires corresponding risk tolerance and capacity. All investments are subject to market fluctuations. Every fund has specific risks, which can significantly increase under unusual market conditions. The fund can use derivatives, which may result in additional risks (particularly counterparty risk).
