China's December Politburo meeting called for strengthening extraordinary counter-cyclical adjustments as well as implementing a more proactive fiscal policy and a moderately loose monetary policy in 2025. China fixed income performed strongly in 2024 on the back of supportive lower rates.

Monthly performance

In December the fund performed positively with 2.1%. The fund's performance was driven by declining Chinese rates over the course of December.

YTD performance

YTD as of the end of December, the fund has delivered a positive performance of 9.9%. The recovery in the China macroeconomic environment is likely to have been the major driver of performance. Rates look set to remain supportive of positive returns from the asset class.

Performance contributors

In 2024, the overweight in Chinese government bonds, as well as the overweight in agencies, contributed to performance.

Performance detractors

Over the past year, duration management, the underweight in local government bonds (LGBs) and the underweight in policy bank bonds, alongside the overweights in state-owned-enterprises (SOEs) and corporates, detracted from performance.

Current investment strategy

For China onshore bonds, we maintain our view that policy coordination should be much better than it has been recently and do not expect CNY rates to sell off sharply, which should be supportive to the asset class. The asset class offers an attractive yield, as well as the benefits of diversification and a low correlation with the rest of the world.

Risks

The fund offers higher return potential than a developed market bond portfolio and therefore bears a higher risk. In addition, emerging markets are at an early stage of development which can typically involve a high level of price volatility and other specific risks such as lower market transparency, regulatory hurdles, corporate governance and political and social challenges. Corresponding risk tolerance and capacity are required. All investments are subject to market fluctuations. The fund can invest in less liquid assets that may be difficult to sell in the case of distressed markets. Every fund has specific risks, which can significantly increase under unusual market conditions. The fund can use derivatives, which may result in additional risks (particularly counterparty risk). This Fund may not be appropriate for investors who plan to withdraw their money before the recommended holding period disclosed in the PRIIPs KID, if available for this share class.
