Asian equities rose in USD terms in 2024, driven by an ascending Taiwanese market thanks to upside potential in AI, as well as China's positive performance after three consecutive negative years amid the government's pivot to a more supportive tone. Singapore and Malaysia also climbed noticeably in response to healthy growth. Communication services increased the most, while materials posted the sharpest decline.

Monthly performance

In December the fund performed positively with 2.0%. In terms of sectors, information technology and industrials were key contributors, while financials detracted the most. Market-wise, China and Taiwan were notable contributors, while the US detracted the most.

YTD performance

YTD as of the end of December, the fund has delivered a positive performance of 2.3%. Sector-wise, IT, consumer discretionary and financials were the biggest detractors, while industrials and materials were the main contributors. In terms of markets, China, India and Korea were key detractors, while Malaysia and Taiwan supported performance.

Performance contributors

Shenzhen Megmeet contributed the most in 2024. The stock outperformed on the back of positive sentiment regarding the company's collaboration with Nvidia to provide power supply products for AI servers. As an industrial power supplier, the company benefited from rising demand for power to AI applications.

Performance detractors

PDD detracted the most in 2024. The stock fell after the company signalled that competition was intensifying. The company's results fell short of consensus expectations, with Q3 profit forecasts undershot due to costs relating to its merchant support measures and increasing investments in building the platform ecosystem. We exited the stock in November.

Current investment strategy

We increased our exposure to China after the policy pivot, as we believe there is merit to the government's more supportive tone. We also reduced our overweight position in IT. While we believe that the tech sector still offers better fundamentals in terms of growth, increasing global competitiveness and improving total shareholder returns in the Asia universe, it remains subject to the effects of the global economic cycle.
