⁴ Reference Index in currency of share class (without costs)

In the first week of August, markets were driven by weak US non-farm payrolls and the unwinding of crowded positions (AI theme). Subsequently, the following week saw a complete reversal, with global markets reaching new all-time highs, supported by a string of favourable economic data points that dispelled recession concerns.

Monthly performance

In August the fund performed positively with 1.7%. Performance was supported by positive stock selection within restaurants, while energy transition equipment detracted.

YTD performance

Currently there is no yearly performance available. Performance has been supported by selection within industrial services and materials, while the consumer sector and the underweight to technology have detracted.

Performance contributors

The fund benefited from an overweight position in Tetra Tech. The company's shares outperformed after investors reacted favourably to its most recent earnings release. Tetra Tech continues to generate strong growth and healthy margins. Furthermore, the firm's order backlog continues to grow, giving investors additional comfort.

Performance detractors

The overweight in Chart Industries weighed on performance. As part of its latest earnings release, the company lowered its EBITDA guidance and stated that it still maintained a sizeable amount of leverage. Free cash flow was also especially disappointing considering the company's leverage, which propelled the stock's underperformance.
